DAVID SHAINBERG

BORN
MAY 9, 1906
MEMPHIS, TENN.

DIED
AUG. 23, 1929
HEBRON, PALESTINE

A martyr to his religion, he died in the flower of his youth, at the hands of Arab assassins, but he will always live in the hearts of the ones who loved him.

David Shainberg

(Deceased)

David Shainberg, who died in 1929, was born in Memphis on May 9, 1906, the son of Sam and Ethel Lewis Shainberg. He received his early education in the Memphis schools, and then graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, before going to the New York Yeshiva to study for the rabbinate.

In August, 1928, young David, eager to obtain a thorough Jewish knowledge in the Talmud and the Hebrew language, went to Palestine, to continue his studies in the Hebron Yeshiva. On Aug. 23, the historical massacres by the Arabs occurred, and David Shainberg was one of the first to fall fighting to defend the Hebron school.

The early death of a fine and promising young man cast a shadow over the Jewish community of Memphis, even as it caused infinite sadness to his parents and sisters and brothers.
