Jacob Bronstein, M. D.

Dr. Jacob H. Bronstein was born in Memphis on August 29, 1897 the son of Samuel and Esther Bronstein. He received his education in the Memphis public schools, attending Market Street School, now know as Christine School, and Central High School, going from there to the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, where he received his B.S. and M.D. degrees. His offices are in the Exchange Building.

In 1919, he married Miss Betty Clark, of Philadelphia, and the couple has two children, Maury Williford, 8, who is in the third grade at Maury School, and Roberta Barbara, 7, who attends the same school. The Bronsteins live at 216 Avalon.

Dr. Bronstein is a general practitioner, with a growing reputation among the younger men. He is exceedingly active in Jewish circles in Memphis, as well as in other civic and social groups here, being affiliated, by actual count, with 32 organizations.

Among the most important are the B'nai B'rith, of which he is first vice-president; American Medical Association; Southern Medical Association; Tennessee Medical Association; Memphis and Shelby County Medical Associations; Shrine; Consistory, Leila Scott Lodge, a Masonic lodge; Elks; American Legion, P. O. W.; Maccabees; Phi Lambda Kappa national medical fraternity; Medical Veterans of the World War; Temple Children of Israel; and Congregation Mischne.
